

Injector Studies

Fay Hannon

EIC cooler injectors fall into uncharted territory in the high charge, high current landscape. Experiments to address concerns with operating in this new regime will be discussed, touching on diagnostics that may need to be developed. For the JLEIC cooler injector, the difficulties of generating, managing and measuring magnetized beams will also be presented.